You recently made a request that our Office of Security issue you a Visitor-No-Escort badge in order that you might utilize the open stacks of the CIA Library in connection with the research you planned to conduct into the Soviet political process since World War II. I am sorry to inform you that I am unable to approve your request. As you can no doubt understand, such badges are issued only to personnel who have official business with the Agency.

Fortunately, as you have indicated, the same resources are available to you at the Library of Congress. I regret the inconvenience of the additional distance you will have to travel from your home to the Library of Congress, but I hope that nonetheless you will be able to successfully complete your research.

Sincerely,

151 Bill

In response to the DCI's inquiry about some retirees retaining badges, the standard policy is that former employees are not permitted to retain the badge unless they are working as a consultant or in a contract relationship with the Agency. In effect, if there is an official reason to retain their clearance for a period of time, there is a solid basis for retaining the badge. It is in the interest of the Agency, and not the former staffer.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

SUBJECT: [REDACTED]

Bill:

1. Attached herewith is a memorandum of 11 July 1974 relating to the request of Mr. [REDACTED] a recent retiree, to have access to the Agency Library for his personal convenience.

2. While not conversant with the personal attitude of Mr. [REDACTED] towards the Agency, I would submit that the request should not be honored on general security policy grounds, even if it could be shown that the requester is very favorably disposed towards the Organization. This is based on the sound and tested principle that all visitors to the Headquarters Building are "official" visitors in the sense that they are sponsored by an appropriate Agency component, which assumes responsibility for requesting a badge and/or providing an escort. I understand that the Intelligence Directorate is not supporting the request and, even though I have not talked to Bill Nelson, I feel sure the Operations Directorate would be very much opposed.

3. You are fully aware that there is strong suspicion in the private sector that all "former" CIA employees continue to be affiliated with the Agency, and this attitude undoubtedly complicated matters in relation to [REDACTED] and E. Howard Hunt in connection with the Watergate incident. The Library issue also came up for discussion at the homecoming event of 11 May 1974, and approval of this request would undoubtedly spread quickly through the informal grapevine, particularly with the alumni groups that are forming.

4. I feel strongly that we should be very careful not to establish an unfortunate precedent that might come back to haunt us. The badge request should be disapproved on policy grounds, and not because Mr. [REDACTED] agrees or disagrees with Agency management. [REDACTED]

MEMORANDUM FOR: Office of Security/Clearance Division

SUBJECT : Request for Badge

1. In my conversation with Mr. Colby on Tuesday, 18 June, I touched on my post-retirement plans and inquired in this connection about the possibility of my obtaining access to the open stacks at the CIA Library for the purpose of facilitating my inquiries into the Soviet political process since the end of World War II. I indicated that my interest in this matter was governed solely by considerations of convenience -- i.e., the CIA Library being closer to my home than the Library of Congress. Mr. Colby posed no objections to this request and indeed expressed a belief that my research and writing after retirement could contribute not only to academic scholarship but also to public appreciation of the professionalism of the Agency.

2. I thereby request that I be issued an appropriate badge to gain access to the open stacks of the CIA Library following my retirement from the Agency on 28 June. Since I will retire before this request is processed and will be out of town until 7 July, I can be reached after that date at home. [redacted] or through [redacted]
